MANAGING DURING TIMES OF CHANGE

Managing during times of change can be tough. Your employees' emotional responses to change will vary. Many resist change and yet others embrace it. This workshop explores the human element of change in the workplace and how leaders can assess what individuals and their teams need in order to move forward and put the past behind.

- Return to work with an understanding of the transition process and the key elements that need to be in place for change to successfully unfold.
- Examine how to assess where your team is within the transition process.
- Learn key components necessary for success.
- Develop a protocol for working with your boss and other workplace leaders to monitor developments and respond to concerns in a timely fashion.

Be prepared for change and have a plan to drive positive outcomes. Save your seat for this workshop and leave with management solutions to engage your team and lead them to success.
